

World War One soldiers born in Jamberoo

This publication lists World War One soldiers who were born in the Jamberoo Municipality. In the period 1914-1918, Kiama, Gerringong and Jamberoo were individual Municipalities.

The methodology used to arrive at these results was to search the National Archives of Australia database for WW1 servicemen who, in their attestation paper, nominated Jamberoo as their place of birth. These results were then cross checked against official Jamberoo birth records as well as NSW BDM records. From this process it was ascertained that many soldiers, who stated that they were born in Jamberoo, were actually not.

A variable in these results could be those soldiers who, in their attestation paper, nominated a district other than Jamberoo, but were actually born in Jamberoo. To counter this would be a major project, cross checking all males born in Jamberoo within a certain date range, from official records, against WW1 attestation forms contained within the National Archives of Australia database.

Therefore, this list does not purport to be authoritative, but is as accurate as present records allow.
